A 21-month agenda of reforms in ARMM

ANAK MINDANAO Rep. Mujiv Hataman is waiting. He is reportedly being considered by President Aquino to serve as officer in charge (OIC) of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) who would be implementing reforms that the the administration are pushing for. When his appointment as ARMM caretaker indeed materializes, the 38-year-old Hataman vows to correct 21 years of wrongdoing in the predominantly Muslim region in 21 months. He recently sat down with the Inquirer Mindanao correspondents for an interview. Excerpts:

Diving into a Data Plan

Now that you own a smartphone, let's help you get it running properly. This primer will help you understand data plans and how you are billed for using them.

When you hold a smartphone in your hands, what you're actually carrying is more than just a phone. With mobile internet, your phone turns into a multimedia player, a web browser, a mobile social network, and so much more! The Internet is literally in the palm of your hands.

The problem arises when most consumers decide not to turn on their data services for fear of being charged a lot of money for Internet access. In fact, most only decide to use their data connection within a WiFi hotspot. However, there are obvious advantages to being able to use the Internet from anywhere and telcos are giving us a number of ways to use it with very reasonable charges.

Telcos around the world have different ways of charging consumers for using the Internet on their smartphones. In the Philippines, the standard rate of charge is PHP 10.00 for 30 minutes of use. That's actually great for people who just need to check in and check out of their digital life. But since smartphones are best utilized for being online 24/7, there are also what we call unlimited daily rates, weekly rates and even unlimited monthly rates which, to be honest is the best way to fully enjoy mobile Internet. These plans are called "time-based" rates because they use length of time and not amount of data downloaded or uploaded.

To go full circle, there are also "volume-based" rates where you are allowed to consume 250MB worth of data for an affordable fixed rate. This plan is ideal for those who want to monitor their bandwidth use.

So which is better for you? If you're the type of person who enjoys downloading new apps all the time, using your phone to tether Internet to your laptop, and streaming video and audio, time-based plans are always best. If you're more into social networking, email, chat, and on a budget, a volume-based rate is definitely best for you.

If you're wondering how much data you actually use, check out http://bit.ly/datacalculator to help you analyze your daily and monthly data consumption. It's easy!

In case you're wondering, here's a simple chart showing the average monthly consumption of data depending on what you use your phone for.

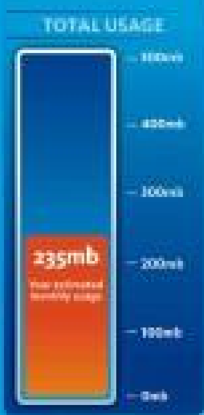

Emails- sending and receiving mail from your phone doesn't take up too much data unless you're dealing with big file attachments. On average, a month's worth of emails can be managed for less than 10MB a month as individual emails are as small as 1-5 kilobytes.

Downloading Games - by far the online activity that consumes the most bandwidth, mobile games from the Android Marketplace are still relatively efficient with data use compared to games on your desktop computer. On average, a game can set you back between 30MB to 50MB. If you download regularly, you're using up roughly 50-100MB a month.

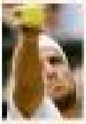

Chat - apps that allow you to chat such as Facebook Chat, Kik Messenger and Yahoo! Messenger take up very little data. It's actually much cheaper than SMS as one letter of the alphabet is equal to 1 byte. 1MB would therefore mean 1 million letters! Chatting with friends takes up less than 5MB a month.

Social Networking - apps like Twitter, Foursquare and Facebook do not consume a lot of data. This is because smartphones have app versions of those services that lessen the load times. You're definitely using up an average of 20MB a month.

Video Streaming - watching video definitely takes up a lot of bandwidth. That's around 50MB to 100MB of regular use.

Owning a smartphone is one thing. But being online 24/7 with a smartphone can make your life more extraordinary. All you need is a daily, weekly, or monthly data plan.

Dengue outbreaks worry countries

DENGUE has become a major threat to health in Asia. This was the conclusion of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the World Health Organization at the launch of Dengue Day on June 15 in Jakarta, Indonesia.

Wage war against Dengue!

Dengue - a now common diagnosis that one fears to hear from the doctor. With some cases leading to death, dengue can strike practically anyone - young, old, male, or female - just from a single mosquito bite.

In a tropical country like the Philippines, there is just no escaping mosquitoes as a fact of life. Following last year's La Niña season, mosquitoes have been breeding non-stop and dengue has become a year-long communicable disease. According to dengue surveillance data from the Department of Health, there were already 115 deaths from about 18,000 cases of dengue in DoH sentinel hospitals from January to April 8. And with the impending rains, dengue cases are expected to rise significantly.

Know more about the dengue carrier

The species of mosquito responsible for the dreaded dengue is called Aedes aegypti, which usually lays its eggs in fresh water. It likes to breed close to humans because we are its primary food. It is said that they usually come out in the early morning and late afternoon and bite from below, or behind the feet and ankle where they cannot be easily noticed. That is why children are advised to wear long pants during the rainy season when dengue is on the rise.

What separates the Aedes aegypti from other mosquito species is the distinguishing marks of white spots over its all black body and the white rings on its legs. These marks may not be seen by the naked eye. And because the Aedes aegypti is a swift flier, it's not easily swatted by newspaper or bare hands. This is where an efficient insect killer comes in handy.

Your efficient and effective weapon against mosquitoes

Aside from keeping your home and surroundings free of stagnant water where mosquitoes love to breed, it's important to spray insecticides regularly to keep these areas mosquito-free. Try Kwik Mosquito Killer. Its specialized formula knocks down dengue-carrying mosquitoes and other flying insects fast. Its fine-mist cap spreads the water-based formula more evenly in the air, hitting more mosquitoes and killing them upon contact.

If you have other insect concerns, you can also try Kwik Multi-Insect Killer (water-based) formula which can efficiently and effectively kill both flying and crawling insects. You will surely be amazed at the value Kwik delivers with its performance and price.

So... free yourselves from the worry of dengue. Be Kwik to act.

Kwik has four variants to address your need against all types of insects - Kwik Multi-Insect Killer (oil-based), Kwik Multi-Insect Killer (water-based), Kwik Mosquito Killer, and Kwik Cockroach Killer.

Find Kwik Insect Killers in leading supermarkets and drugstores nationwide.

Dengue prevention within your reach

The government is doing all it can in controlling the widely-feared dengue. You too, can take full preventive control by following these seven simple tips:

1. Keep your environment clean. Mosquitoes love dark and damp areas, so it's best to keep your garage or attic free of accumulated junk. Set a weekly cleaning day to coincide with your barangay's garbage collection to get rid of potential mosquito havens.

2. Eliminate mosquito habitats in your surroundings. Regularly inspect and empty water from sites where mosquitoes can breed, such as flower pots, roof gutters, trash bins, and receptacles like basins, pails, and old tires. Keep your surroundings clean and dry.

3. Check your home for stagnant water. Because the dengue-carrier Aedes Aegypti prefers to breed in clean, stagnant water, a clean home doesn't necessarily make it dengue-proof. Inspect the bottom of the refrigerator, kitchen and bathroom floors, and areas with leaks. Wipe them dry or keep them covered. For standing water that cannot be covered, sprinkle salt to kill mosquito larvae.

4. Make sure windows and door screens are "bug tight". It's nice to let the cool breeze into your homes, but put nets or screens over windows first. Fix broken screens and keep doors closed to minimize mosquitoes entering your home.

5. Spray insecticide regularly. Use Baygon Mosquito Killer or Baygon Multi-Insect Killer (water-based) inside your home and in surrounding areas to knock down flying insects fast. Keep people away from sprayed areas for at least 30 minutes.

6. Wear long sleeves, pants, and socks. Limit your exposure to mosquitoes by covering as much of your skin area as possible. Regularly wipe your children dry from sweat as this attracts mosquitoes.

7. Put on Guard insect repellent. Children love to play outdoors, but they're also prime targets of mosquitoes. Guard with breakthrough formula Picaridin is gentle on skin and effective against mosquitoes for 4-8 hours. Apply on all exposed skin, especially bite-worthy areas like the neck and ankles. Avoid putting near the eyes, nose, and mouth.

Dengue outbreaks worry countries

'Aedes aegypti is a vector for transmitting several tropical fevers. Only the female bites for blood which she needs to mature her eggs.'

According to the WHO website, "Asia's ... bears 75 percent of the current global disease burden from dengue. Asean has the highest number of dengue infections in the Asia Pacific and this has significant impact on the socio-economic status of the Member States."

The Philippines is just one of the many countries that reported dengue incidence in the past. Just on the first half of this year, thousands of dengue cases and hundreds of deaths have already been reported.

In spite of the massive information dissemination of the Department of Health and other government agencies, the cases still continue to rise.

Prevention is just one of the keys to battling the increase of dengue victims. The steps may be small but the effect is huge.

Dengue is caused by a virus and is transmitted by the "deadly" mosquito called Aedes aegypti. Sadly, dengue is prevalent in tropical places such as the Philippines. While the cases increase during the rainy season, transmission happens any time of the year. Often referred to as tiger mosquito because of its white stripes on its black body, Aedes aegypti usually attacks during daytime.

It is advised that any person who has been having a high fever for at least three days should be brought to the doctor for early treatment. Other symptoms of dengue include severe headache, painful joints and muscles, pain behind eyes, a rash (may appear as fever subsides).

WHO website says that fever patients that "have red spots on skin (petechiae), bleeding from gums or nose, vomiting of blood" may be suspected of suffering from dengue. Fever with dengue may have a dangerous complication which is hemorrhagic or shock syndrome.

Other indications that a person may be having a dengue are "bleeding from gums, nose bleeding (epistaxis), vomiting blood (hematemesis), clammy skin, cold and sweaty extremities, drowsiness, and/or restlessness, and fever patients remain ill, a sharp drop in temperature and clinical condition deteriorates.

WHO on its website warns: "Suspect dengue fever if several children have a high continuous fever for at least two days which fails to respond to treatment for malaria, meningitis, pneumonia, pharyngitis, and other causes. Suspect dengue fever if unexplained deaths, with or without hemorrhage, occur within one week after onset of fever."

Family members should note that "fluid management at hospital is critical and that platelet transfusion not be vital."

Time and time again, health officials ask people to eliminate human-made containers with clean water from their homes because that's where dengue virus carrying mosquitoes usually breed.

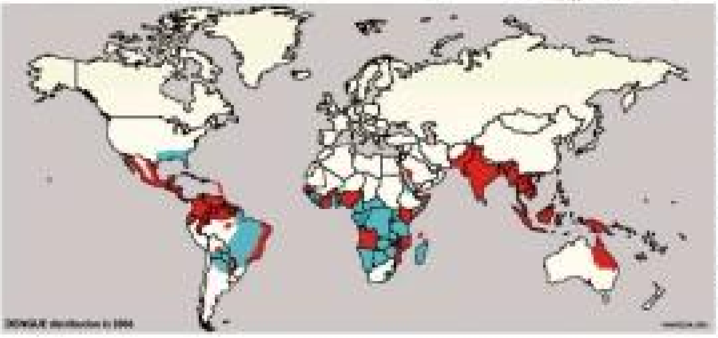

The WHO website also gives some tips on how to prevent dengue through Environmental Cleanup of Breeding Containers such as old tires, tanks, drums, jars, coolers, and even flower vases. Always clean up or bury or burn small containers and garbage.

It is also environment friendly if, instead of keeping these containers, why not give or sell them to companies that use recycled materials. There are non-government organizations that use recycled materials such as plastic bottles to build houses and even school chairs.

The main thing is to avoid the mosquitoes come into closer to humans. That is why WHO also advises personal protection: "Use mosquito repellant when outdoors during daytime. Put fly wire/screening on doors and windows, mosquito coils or vapor mats, mosquito nets for children or elderly who sleep during the day."

However, the WHO website also says that there is "no specific treatment, no vaccine dengue available. Use supportive care - pain relief, drink fluids, rest. Use paracetol (paracetamol). And do not use aspirin (salicyclic acid), do not use ibuprofen."

When a person shows any of the signs indicated above, it is best to rush him or her to the hospital for quick treatment.

Frequently asked questions about Dengue

When should I suspect Dengue?

Dengue should be suspected when you have sudden onset of fever. The fever is high 39-40 degrees C. It is accompanied with severe headache (mostly in the forehead), pain behind the eyes, body aches and pains, rash on the skin and nausea or vomiting. The fever lasts for 5-7 days. In some patients, fever comes down on the 3rd or 4th day but comes back. All the above symptoms and signs may not be present in the patient. The patient feels much discomfort after the illness.

What is the difference between suspected and probable case of dengue?

If a patient suspected to be having dengue has reduced platelets or an increase in blood haematocrit, then the patient has probable dengue. These additional findings make dengue more likely. Patients with dengue may not have a high haematocrit if the person was anaemic to start with.

(Platelets are cells in blood that help to stop bleeding. Haematocrit indicates the thickness of blood)

Can people suffer from dengue and not appear ill?

Yes. There are many people who are infected with the virus and do not suffer from any signs or symptoms of the disease. For every patient with symptoms and signs there may be 4-5 persons with no symptoms or with very mild symptoms.

Can dengue fever be treated at home?

Most patients with dengue fever can be treated at home. They should take rest, drink plenty of fluids that are available at home and eat a nutritious diet. Whenever available, Oral Rehydration Salts/ORS (commonly used in treating diarrhoea) is preferable. Sufficient fluid intake is very important as it can lift progression into DHF or DSS where loss of body fluid / blood is the most salient feature. It is important to look for danger signs and contact the doctor as soon as any one or more of these are found.

Can dengue fever become dangerous?

The infection can become dangerous since it may cause damage to the blood vessels. The damage may range from increased permeability of the blood vessels, causing leakage of blood fluid (plasma) into various organs to completely broken blood vessels that cause bleeding. The symptoms and signs of dengue haemorrhagic fever and dengue shock syndrome are related to damage to the blood vessels and derangements in functioning in components of blood that help it to clot.

Are there any long term ill effects of dengue fever?

Most people who suffer from dengue fever recover in 1-2 weeks time. Some may feel tired for several weeks. However, if symptoms persist after this period, consult a doctor.

'Persons with dengue fever should rest and drink plenty of fluids. They should consult a doctor immediately for prompt treatment'

Tips on Dengue prevention

At all times

- Turn pails and watering cans over and store them under shelter.
- Remove water in plant pot plates. Clean and scrub the plate thoroughly to remove mosquito eggs. Avoid the use of plant pot plates, if possible.
- Loosen soil from potted plants to prevent the accumulation of stagnant water on the surface of the hardened soil.
- Do not block the flow of water in scupper drains along common corridors in HDB estates. Avoid placing potted plants and other paraphernalia over the scupper drains.
- Cover rarely used gully traps. Replace the gully trap with non-perforated ones and install anti-mosquito valves.
- Cover bamboo pole holders after use. Rainwater can potentially accumulate in these bamboo pole holders if they are uncovered and create a habitat.
- No tray or receptacles should be placed beneath and on top of any air-conditioning unit so as not to create a condition favorable for mosquito breeding.

Every other day

- Change water in flower vases. Clean and scrub the inner sides of vases. Wash roots of flowers and plants thoroughly as mosquito eggs can stick to them easily.

Once a week

- Clear fallen leaves and stagnant water in your scupper drains and garden. These leaves could collect water or cause blockages to the drains, thus resulting in the buildup of stagnant water.
- Clean any stagnant water in your air cooler unit.

Once a month

- Add granular insecticide into vases, gully traps and roof gutters, even if they are dry.
- Clear away fallen leaves in roof gutter and apron drains. If not practically feasible, remove the roof gutters.

June is dengue awareness month

"Dengue cases surge during the months of June until August," Health Assistant Secretary Enrique Tayag said, adding that Aedes Aegypti mosquitoes can breed even in very small receptacles like coconut husks or empty bottles.

Reported dengue cases have already reached 27,071 from January to June 11 this year, prompting the Department of Health (DOH) to heighten the awareness on dengue incidents in the country by declaring June as "Dengue Awareness Month."

A statement from DOH said the total number of dengue cases is 4.12 percent lower compared to the same period last year (28,234). There were also 172 deaths reported from the bites of [illegible] by the Aedes Aegypti mosquitoes.

The Philippines ranks 4th in the list of Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) member countries contaminated by dengue, according to health experts who attended the first Asean-wide Dengue Day in Jakarta on June 15.

The event called for a region-wide action in controlling dengue, which is "one of the most neglected tropical diseases in the world," said Philippine dengue expert Dr. [illegible].

Lao PDR recorded the highest incidence of dengue in the region in 2010 followed by Malaysia, Vietnam, and the Philippines. Thailand ranked fifth followed by Cambodia, Indonesia, and Myanmar, reported [illegible].

In a statement released in Manila for Asean Dengue Day, the World Health Organization (WHO) called for a united "battle against the dengue, which has developed into a formidable threat."

DOH's Dengue Awareness Month project carries the "[illegible]" and the project aims to heighten awareness of the strategy to fight dengue by adopting the 4S [illegible].

The Centers for Health Development (CHDs) are directed to collaborate with their LGU counterparts to ensure that a [illegible] activity with the CHDs.

DOH's 4S Kontra Dengue strategy is composed of "search and destroy," "seek early consultation," "self-protection measures" and "say no to indiscriminate fogging."

Most of the cases came from the National Capital Region (6,732), Central Luzon (4,183), and Calabarzon (3,535).

Most of the reported cases were from the following regions: National Capital Region (6,394), Region III or Central Luzon (4,524), Region IV-A (3,955). In the National Capital Region, most of the cases came from Quezon City (2,017), [illegible] City (970), and Caloocan City (951).

Clusters of cases (3 or more cases in a barangay during the past 4 weeks) in Metro Manila were detected in Brgy. 176 in Caloocan City; [illegible] Santa Monica, and [illegible] in Quezon City; [illegible] City.

"Dengue cases surge during the months of June until August," Health Assistant Secretary Enrique Tayag said, adding that Aedes Aegypti mosquitoes can breed even in very small receptacles like coconut husks or empty bottles.

Meanwhile, Tayag disclosed that June 15 and every year thereafter will be observed as Asean Dengue Day to foster more awareness about the illness.

Tayag reminded the public that dengue, already an all-year round disease, is more common during rainy days when there are more mosquito breeding sites.

To prevent dengue, he advised the public to destroy all possible mosquito breeding sites like old tires and tin cans, clean rooftop gutters, replace water in flower vases regularly and to use mosquito nets or protective clothing. He also stressed that fogging may be done only in outbreak areas.

"The people, especially schoolchildren, can protect themselves from day bites by using topical insect repellents or by wearing long-sleeved shirts. Suspected cases are urged to seek treatment if there are persistently high fever, appearance of skin rashes or any signs of bleeding," Tayag concluded.

INSECT REPELLENT LOTIONS

and the buzz around them that just won't die

They're everywhere and everyone uses them. Best of all, they work.

But there's a question about insect repellent lotions that's spurring millions of Google results: How safe are they?

Most insect repellents contain a chemical called N,N-Diethyl-m-toluamide, or DEET for short. Insects are said to hate the way DEET smells, which is what makes it effective. Not surprisingly, most humans have the same reaction to its odor!

In fact, this chemical is so strong, it doesn't only have an effect on bugs, but also on your kids' favorite superhero or princess costume! That's because DEET can corrode plastics, synthetic fabric and leather. It also reacts with painted and varnished surfaces such as wooden furniture.

So it's no surprise that the use of DEET is linked to skin irritation too. Since kids have delicate skin, it's a good idea to consider an alternative to your DEET-based insect repellent lotion.

The ingredient to look for

Fortunately, the long search for a gentler insect repellent has led to the discovery of Picaridin, a substance that repels mosquitoes, flies, ticks, and fleas just as effectively as DEET, but is gentler and safer.

Because Picaridin has no history of skin irritation cases, the World Health Organization in Geneva, Switzerland recommends it as the ideal insect repellent.

In Europe, U.S. and Australia, the best-selling insect repellents today are Picaridin-based. Aside from being non-irritating, Picaridin is non-toxic and is odorless, colorless and feels comfortable on the skin.

The one thing you can do to keep your kids safe

Just as you consider many things when shopping for your family, do think twice about the chemicals found in products they regularly use. Read the label. It's a simple thing to do, but it safeguards your family's long-term health.

And when it comes to insect repellent lotions, give new Guard a try. Your kids will love its non-sticky, non-greasy formulation and powder-fresh scent – plus the fact that you can relax when putting it on your kids' skin, knowing it doesn't contain DEET!

You can get Guard insect repellent lotion in Puregold, Robinsons, Rustan's, Shopwise, Waltermart, Watsons, and other leading supermarkets and drugstores in the country.

KEEPING KIDS HEALTHY WITH WATSONS PHARMACY

When it comes to raising healthy kids, some knowledge, some common sense, and a lot of patience and love go a long way! At their young age, their immune system, which helps the body fight off has not yet been developed.

They are more vulnerable to bacteria, parasites, and viruses, especially now that they are back in school, and the rainy weather makes them more susceptible to common colds and flu, as well as dengue and typhoid fever. Here, Watsons Pharmacy shares with us a guide on how we can help kids build a strong immune system.

Get Enough Sleep. Young kids should get an adequate amount of sleep for their body to develop and function properly. It is recommended that kids at ages 3 to 12 need 10 to 11 hours of uninterrupted sleep to repair and reenergize.

Stay Active. Many kids are naturally active – they are always on the go, playing ball, biking, swimming, or engaged in whatever activity they enjoy. Too many hours watching television or playing computer games, however, can lead to a more sedentary lifestyle. Encourage your kids to exercise to strengthen their muscles, improve their flexibility and balance, and to help in the body's proper daily function.

Eat Right. It's never too early to teach kids to eat the right food – a good balance of protein, calcium, carbs, and important vitamins and minerals. You may also look into a low-glycemic diet, which some consider is a great first step to wellness. Glycemic ratings are the latest scientific method of measuring the effect of foods on blood sugar levels, energy, and weight gain.

They also need to drink a lot of water, which is an essential building block of health.

Practice Good Hygiene. Good hygiene practices begin at home, and it is important for parents to lead the way through their example. Keep them safe and healthy by training them to wash their hands properly, and to always cover their mouths when they sneeze or cough.

Supplement. Even with a relatively healthy lifestyle, your kids can benefit from quality nutritional supplements. Two of the most important vitamins in strengthening your child's system are vitamins B and C, which they can get from fruits and vegetables, as well as fortified food.

WHAT'S IN YOUR WATSONS

Watsons Pharmacy recommends these vitamins and food supplements to help keep kids healthy. What's more, shoppers will get a free National Bookstore gift card worth P100 for a minimum P500 single or accumulated purchase of any participating product from June 27 to July 27.

Cherifer Syrup with Taurine and Chlorella Growth Factor maximizes children's growth potential and boosts the immune system.

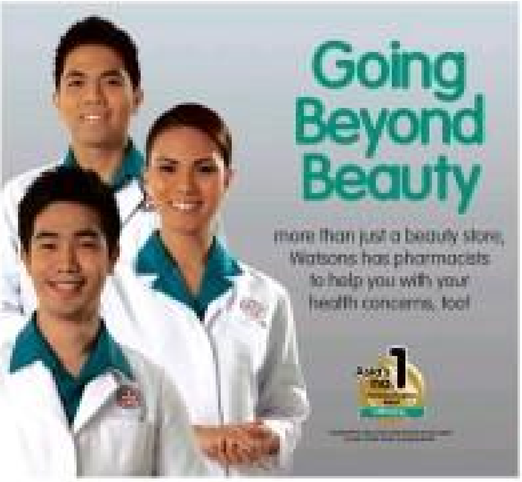

Tiki Tiki Star Syrup contains essential vitamins and nutrients for proper growth and development.

Ceelin Plus increases body resistance against stress, infections and diseases.

Nutroplex Multivitamins promotes growth and mental development.

Memo+ Children's Formula Syrup helps keep the brain functioning optimally.
